

Citizenship

The rights, responsibilities, and
duties of a citizen

Naturalization

The process to gain citizenship to a country

Constitution

A constitution is a set of rules that guides how a country, state, or other political organization works. The constitution may tell what the branches of the government are, what powers they have, and how they work. It may also state the rights of citizens.

Citizen

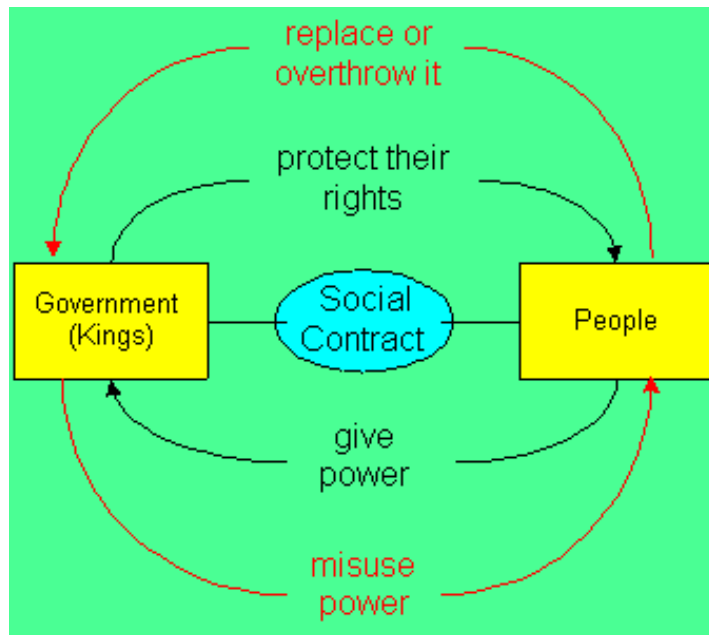

©Callum Bowsie

a member of a community who owes loyalty to a community and government. They deserve to have their rights protected

Social contract

Theory of Citizenship

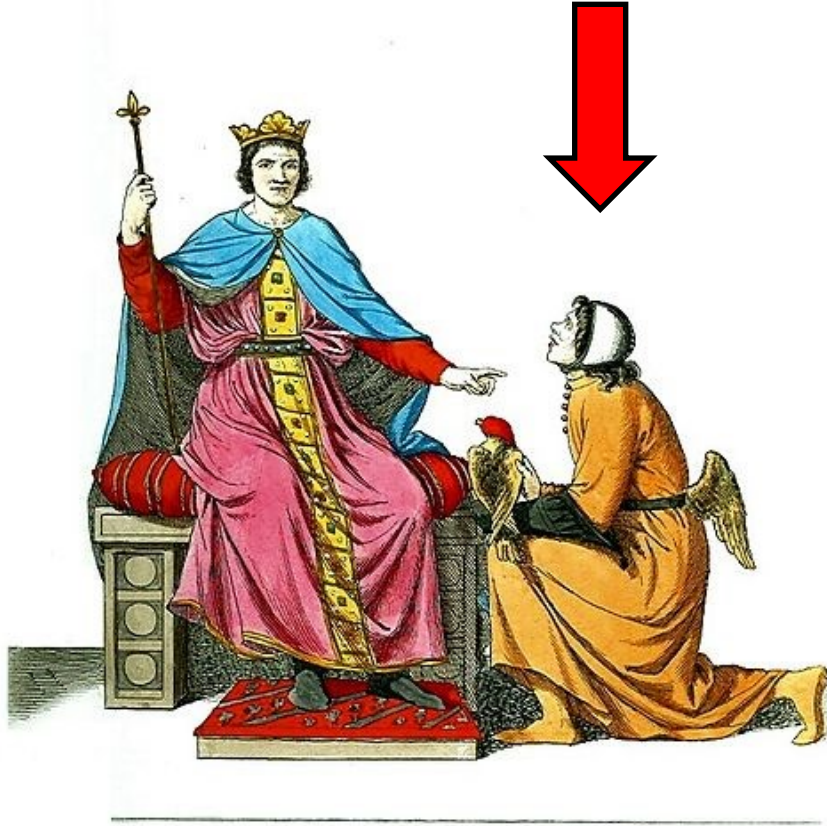

A balance between individual rights such as the right to vote, and individual Responsibilities such as the duty to serve one's country

City– State

A state that has its own Government and consists of a city and the area around it

Subject

A person who is governed by a Monarch, who lives in the territory, who enjoys protection, and owes allegiance to a state.

Philosopher

A person who studies ideas about knowledge, truth, the nature and meaning of life

Republic

An independent state that is governed by elected representatives and by an elected leader

Direct Democracy

A form of government in which all laws are created by a general vote of society

Free-born

born to parents who are not slaves

Native-Born

Jus soli— the right of anyone born in the territory of a state to be a citizen of that state

Patrician

Wealthy land-owning Roman citizens who made less than 10% of Roman Republic. Upper Ruling Class held most of the power and control. They could serve in the senate

Plebian

The common people of ancient Rome. Merchants, farmers, and craft-workers who were not land owners. Eventually plebians elected tribunes to represent them.

Thesis Statement

Sentence or sentences that has the main point of your essay and tell the reader what the essay is going to be about

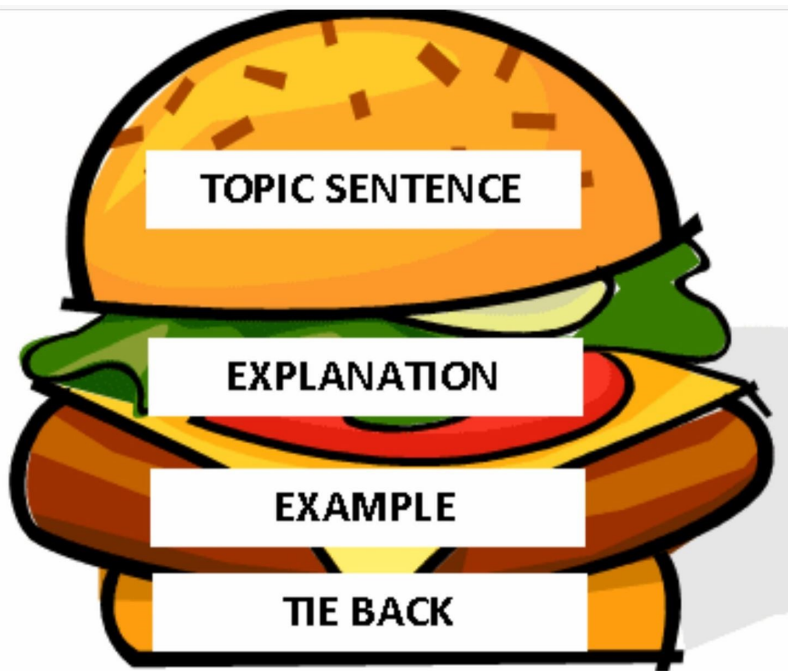

Thesis Statement Formula

Essay Topic

+

Formal statement about the topic

Paragraph

Group of sentences that begins with a topic sentence and have sentences that support the main idea of the paragraph

Conclusion

It is summing up your argument about what you have been writing about.